Summary of progress (Discuss concepts identified in the course, learning plan progress, skills)

Reem you are a quiet individual who always has a smile on her face ready to learn! Despite your shyness you still participate during post conference and is well prepared for your day as you are knowledgeable about most of the cardiac diagnoses we are studying. As your instructor I can tell that you took advantage of researching the most common cardiac diagnoses on the unit, prior to the start of clinical, as you have a comfort with the information and is willing to share your new found knowledge. You are a responsible individual who always has her assignments in on time, comes to clinical prepared, and is dressed professionally in her scrubs with equipment ready to go. Even though you may find initiating therapeutic relationships difficult you still push yourself to find a way to connect to others in a respectful and responsible manner.

At present you have taken vitals on your clients, performed hourly comfort rounds, initiated proper donning on and off of PPE, and become more comfortable with the bedside charting where you can now document your vitals accurately.

Your journals are articulate and detailed providing much insight on how your experience and journal article impacted you as a nurse. You are always in a happy cheerful disposition and is always willing to learn new things. You have a thirst for knowledge and understanding how primary and secondary diagnoses fit together. You will be presenting your learning plan after break week and submitting your first clinical worksheet

Great start to the semester!

Strengths (Things you did well consistently):

- your willingness to help others
- your kind, caring and empathetic disposition
- taking accurate vital signs and documenting them right away in the charting
- your keenness to learn and observe as much as you can
- your professional interactions with others
- time management skills and organization

Areas for Improvement/Growth (Things you need to work on): Must be addressed in your learning plan for the next clinical experience

-continue to work on your confidence and share in post conference as you have important information to share
-to continue researching your clients clinical diagnoses and understanding how their relationships
-to work on your independence in carrying out your shift
-don't be afraid to ask questions
