Details

Summary of progress (Discuss concepts identified in the course,
learning plan progress, skills)

Reem has demonstrated safe practices for her patient by ensuring she checks the original physician's medication orders with the CMAR before proceeding to administer medication, she observes all rights of medication administration doing safety checks and filling out proper documentation. On her medication day, Reem made sure to have her patient's medications properly researched having knowledge of what she was giving, why and what side effects could potentially result. On her medication day Reem delivered oral, NG and IV medication, she was capable of carrying out the task as well as programming the IV pump. Reem has safely completed several simple dressing changes, trach care, several sterile dressing changes with packing, cared for many patients with an IV, NG, foley catheters as well as completed proper documentation for such, has cared for and removed a heparin lock, has completed assessments, vital signs, accuchecks and completed proper documentation. Kim is also demonstrates accountability for patients who are restrained and is aware of the policy and responsibility on the part of the caregiver when patients are either chemically or mechanically restrained.

Reem communicates well with peers, patients and team members. Reem keeps her co-assign nurses up to date with patient status. Agreeably, she demonstrates strong communication skills in the clinical setting with the care team, her patients and peers. Reem's charting is accurate and concise, focusing on priority diagnosis and directing her care towards goals that are achievable and appropriate for the patient.

Reem can easily care for a three patient assignment, is well organized completing all tasks, helps her colleagues, and gets time for breaks. Reem passed her medication test on the first attempt. She demonstrates critical thinking by obtaining vital signs before giving cardiac medications with indications to hold. Reem ensures comfort for her patients by repositioning them frequently and as needed, also giving required bowel routine and documenting bowel regimen per policy. Reem also uses critical thinking when performing procedures with her patients such as wound packing; she will pre-emptively give pain relievers to reduce her patients discomfort.

Reem is a vital part of the health care team, she eagerly accepts her assignment, communicates well with his peers, patients, and team members and demonstrates excellent skills in delegation and communication. Reem displays leadership qualities through her willingness to learn, her hard-work and positive attitude.

Strengths (Things you did well consistently):

Reem is exceptional at organizing and delegating tasks, proving that she is reliable, self-sufficient, and has great leadership skills. Reem works for the University as a Peer Mentor for other students who require extra assistance and tutoring. Her knowledge and experience from this opportunity shows in the clinical setting as she is confident and proficient in her skills.

Reem displays a high-level of knowledge on enteral feedings. She completed an informative handout presentation for her peers on enteral feeds and feeding pumps.

Reem has done exceptionally well with working with "difficult patients" and patients with AOB/Language barriers. She is very kind and calm in these situations and is a soothing presence during their encounter. These patients are very receptive to her calm and caring approach.

Reem has greatly developed her personal confidence in her work. She has a humble yet confident attitude and is seen as a leader in our clinical group.

Areas for Improvement/Growth (Things you need to work on): Must be addressed in your learning plan for the next clinical experience

Meeting 3rd year expectations and is quite capable of working independently. Reem has worked hard this semester in seeking out opportunities and increasing her knowledge base and skill set regarding general tasks, dressing changes, med pass, therapeutic communication, team work, charting etc. Great work Reem!
