Details

Summary of progress (Discuss concepts identified in the course, learning plan progress, skills)

I consistently arrive on time, am eager to learn, and possess excellent critical thinking abilities. My inability to manage my time well is a hindrance to ensuring that tasks are completed on schedule. I'm a terrific listener, and I firmly think that I should speak up for my patients. In the future, I want to figure out how to organize my time more effectively and gather my thoughts more precisely so that the medical team can all understand them. I need to concentrate on medical jargon, keep learning new things every day, and carry on contributing to the team.

Strengths (Things you did well consistently):

My ability to communicate is, I believe, my greatest asset; I never seem to have any trouble making my point known or ensuring that others are heard. My leadership abilities are another asset; I don't hesitate to lend a hand to others or see to it that the team gets the job done. I need to make sure I devote the same amount of time to developing my strengths and weaknesses and keep learning and growing in order to support this while still making progress in other areas.

Areas for Improvement/Growth (Things you need to work on): Must be addressed in your learning plan for the next clinical experience

Time management for paperwork and charting is undoubtedly one of my weaknesses. I should pay a little more attention to paperwork and documentation since they are equally as crucial as the application, which I concentrate on too much. Prior to moving on to the next assignment, I should be taking more time to slow down and make sure everything is charted. I must make sure I'm prepared for the day and well-organized in order to assist with this. In the future, I can take time management lessons or figure out how to set up automatic reminders in my notebook to document tasks before removing them.
